* **Figure 6.6c:** A duplicate of the Pink House layer, a textured background layer, was removed and replaced with a new background layer, called the Layer Blending Background. 1. Select the Duplicate Layer option from the Move menu. Double-click the new layer (Figure 6.6c, image 1) to move it into place. You now have two layers of the pink house, with the second layer slightly behind the first. You can make this transparent by choosing Layer>Transparency>Alpha to Alpha. Now you should select the first layer (the pink house, image 2) and rename it Pink House 1. This gives you a layer where you can work with the photo. The image appears to be a little bit too light in the color.

You can add more layers to the layer with the pink house and combine them. Go to Image>New>Layer. Select the white and black color swatches to choose colors for your image. Figure 6.6d shows colors for this image. Click Add New Layer to duplicate the new layer. Figure 6.6e shows how it looks on the image. 2. Select the Healing Brush tool from the Tools panel. Click the pink house layer to select it. Choose Healing from the Brush Preset menu. The default settings select the largest area that will blend together with the duplicate layer (Figure 6.6f). 3. Click in the background to erase the old color. Use the sliders in the upper right of the Healing dialog box to refine the Healing Brush's results. Figure 6.6g shows the settings I used. 4. Click OK to accept the settings and see the results. You can then move the white and black color swatches over to this layer. 5. Click Add New Layer to duplicate the new layer. Figure 6.6h shows the result. Figure 6.6i shows the Pink House layer with layer masking enabled. It is one of the examples of layer masks you can find in Photoshop. 6. Create a layer mask for the Pink House layer by clicking Layer>Create Layer Mask>From Selection. 7. Use the Brush tool and paint over the pink house layer. This will create a soft brush stroke over the entire pink layer. 8. Click OK to create the mask. 9. Click Layer>Layer Mask>Reveal>Erase

Q: How to make Objective C send parameters in the request I have to make an iOS application send some parameters to web server, the problem is the parameters I send via my application are "php" parameters not "GET" like on my other iOS application, Here is an image of request header When I use cURL I can see the correct get parameters. In order to make my application send a simple GET request to my webserver, how can I send my parameters? I know there are alot of posts about request parameters, and I did read a lot of them, but I couldn't find the answer for the problem I have. Thanks in advance for your help. A: The @"someparameter" is not for params, it is for request body. You would probably have better luck with a JSON request as that makes it easy to read in the code, read the info, and write to the server. In that JSON you can also specify the fields, and in the request the name will be in the key (then you use NSJSONReadingMutableContainers to access the info). You need to make a request to: (Note that the key value pairs are the field names, and the value is the value, so if your JSON says I want a field called "foo" and the value is "bar", the above request would be: Then on the server, you would use a query that read as such: p1 = $_GET["p1"]; p2 = $_GET["p2"]; If you are just starting with iOS development, I would highly recommend taking a look at SBJSON. It is the official JSON parser for iOS. Formation of m-xylene and p-xylene during styrene oxidation over catalytic spent detergent catalyst. Styrene oxidation was conducted over a commercially available Nafion-impregnated copper sulfate-containing spent detergent catalyst (catalyst A) at a mixture ratio of styrene:oxygen:water (1:3:4 wt %) in a glass tube. The products, including m-xylene and p-xylene, were analyzed
